TINTON FALLS, N.J., Sept. 22, 2016 /PRNewswire/ -- Commvault (NASDAQ: CVLT), a global leader in enterprise backup, recovery, archive and the cloud, is celebrating its tenth year as a public company today. To commemorate this anniversary N. Robert Hammer, Commvault chairman, president and CEO, will ring the Nasdaq stock market closing bell at the Nasdaq MarketSite in Times Square this afternoon.

Founded 20 years ago, Commvault has established itself as the industry leader in data backup, recovery and archive. The company is also building on this leadership position with a powerful combination of its fully integrated portfolio of solutions – Commvault Software and the Commvault Data Platform – and expert services that enable enterprises to address key challenges in today's digital economy, including the move to the cloud, new security and compliance demands, increasing use of mobile and other new types of computing devices and rapidly growing amounts of data.

"Commvault was founded on the idea there is tremendous value in data, and that we would be successful if we focused relentlessly on helping our customers both protect their data and secure insight and value from their data. This core focus has proved remarkably prescient as the digital economy increasingly makes data the center of everything," said N. Robert Hammer, chairman, president and CEO, Commvault. "Our enduring focus on this philosophy, along with our commitment to continuous innovation and unmatched customer service, and the dedication of our employees, the support of our partners and the loyalty of our customers have allowed us to achieve our current backup, recovery and archive leadership position. We look forward to further strengthening this position by continuing to deliver powerful solutions for protecting and activating data -- whether it resides in the cloud, the data center, hybrid environments or on mobile."
